

STRIKE OVER.

The Ranks of the Duquesne Strikers Broken.

Between Five and Six Hundred of Them Go to Work.

They Nearly Fall Over Each Other in Their Effort to Get Through the Gates When the Seven O'clock Whistle Blows—Littigation Will Be Continued.

Duquesne, Pa., Aug. 9.—Between 500 and 600 men, acting unanimously, as previously agreed on, effectually broke the strike in the Carnegie mill at this place at 6 o'clock Monday morning. They returned to work in a body, and the soldiers were not required to protect them. The repair men had the mill ready for running, steam was turned on, and several departments were almost full and began to turn out finished steel.

There were many members of the new amalgamated lodges formed here since the strike began among those who went back to work and they did it openly, without fear of what their companions would say. There was no disorder at all. Small crowds of the men who had not taken advantage of the offer of Superintendent Morrison stood near the mill gates, just outside of the line guarded by the soldiers, watching the men return, but they said never a word. The battalion had been drawn up in marching order and was kept in line, fully armed, for two hours, but no word of command was given. Some of the most skilled among the strikers were in the number returning to work.

One of them said: "We have been watching the course of events very closely, and while we would have done all we could to have helped the Homestead men, we saw it was useless; that the company meant business, and that we could not win without a struggle that would have been too hard for men who have families. We talked this over and we are glad now that we took such a unanimous step."

The officials are well pleased with the action of the men, and all is pleasant. The news at Homestead had a depressing effect on the strikers there, but there was no sign of wavering in the strike.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 8.—Secretary Lovejoy, of the Carnegie Steel Co., was asked Monday morning by a United Press representative what was the plan of his company toward the Homestead strikers. He said: "We have started in on the conquest of riot by law, and it will be carried to a finish. There will be anywhere from fifty to one hundred and fifty more informations on murder and aggravated riot charges made against the Homestead strikers before we are through with them. We are proceeding carefully, and get our evidence to a certainty before the charge is made. We mean to make no mistake, and the best detective skill in the country has been engaged. We have officers of long experience at work in Homestead, and the informations I make are on evidence gotten by those men, who will be produced in court and give sworn testimony. There would have been more informations before this, but for the fact that many strikers engaged in the riot have run away. Meantime evidence against them is being gathered, and, when they return, information will be made against them and they will be arrested. If they do not come back they will be followed up until they are arrested and brought back for trial."

Big Blaze at Baltimore.

Baltimore, Aug. 9.—Monday morning fire was discovered in the large four-story furniture factory of John Chatterton & Co., No. 12 S. Frederick street. The flames had enveloped the whole of the Chatterton building and communicated to Green & Co.'s Hope Brass works, at No. 15. The roof of No. 17, occupied by Oppenheimer & Co. as a solder factory and warehouse, also caught. Fleischman & Co.'s building was also soon ablaze, and Schlegel's Orchestra Hall was also afire. The fire was gotten under control, and a careful estimate places the loss at $200,000, with an insurance of about $75,000.

In H. Clay King's Behalf.

Austin, Tex., Aug. 9.—Gov. Hogg has been petitioned to intercede in behalf of H. Clay King, the lawyer who killed Col. Poston in Memphis over a year ago. King has relatives and many friends in Texas, and it is through their influence that Gov. Hogg is called upon to ask for commutation or respite. His relatives hope, by getting governors of different states to request leniency, that time will be gained and thereby give them more chance of success in battling for King's life.

Unknown Woman Found Dead.

Jeffersonville, Ind., Aug. 9.—With an incision of a hatchet in her left temple, an unknown woman, possibly 40 years of age, was found on the reefs of the falls Monday morning. She was evidently murdered, and to hide the crime was thrown in the river. She was dressed in black alpaca, with faultless linen, and had a beautiful face. The woman is lying at the morgue awaiting identification. She is supposed to be a resident of Madison, Ind. The body had been in the water only twelve hours.

Torpedo Boat Sunk.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—The British torpedo boat No. 75 has been sunk off "The Maiden," a cluster of rocks off the east coast of Ireland, in the Irish sea. The torpedo boat had collided with torpedo boat No. 77 and received such injuries that she went down soon after. The crew of fifteen were saved.

Two Brakemen Killed.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 9.—A Baltimore & Ohio train ran into a beef train near the Bellaire (Ohio) bridge Monday morning, wrecking both engines and two cars. John Lovejoy, a brakeman, was fatally injured, and Thomas Feeny, also a brakeman, internally hurt.

CASE OF PRIVATE IAMS.

Colonel Streator's Action Defended From a Military Standpoint.

The following article concerning this famous case is from The Army and Navy Journal:

"The one thing to regret in connection with the punishment of Private Iams of the Pennsylvania National Guard is the popular indignation it awakens, and the possibility that it may result in the punishment by the civil courts of his commanding officer, Lieutenant Colonel J. B. R. Streator. However, our Pennsylvania correspondent reports that the Colonel is not at all worried over his prospects, and as he is a lawyer no doubt he has good ground for the confidence he shows. His action in the case of Iams may be criticised upon technical grounds, but, nevertheless, it was a prompt and soldierly recognition of the necessity for taking vigorous measures to enforce discipline in an emergency. It is on officer's business to sacrifice even his life when the necessity calls for it, and he is entitled to commendation and not to complaint from the great public when he shows his great readiness to take personal risks to save his command from the demoralization which must inevitably follow the slightest yielding to the spirit of mutiny. Many will recall the occasion when Admiral Daniel Ammen, U. S. N., deliberately shot down two men on the deck of a Pacific mail steamer because they refused to obey his order, forbidding them to cross a certain line. Disobedience meant mutiny, and mutiny under the then existing circumstances would, as Ammen believed, have been followed by a train of serious consequences. So, without one moment's hesitation, the gallant sailor risked his commission, his life—everything, to prevent the outbreak. The affair was investigated by a Court of Inquiry, and instead of censure, Admiral (then Captain) Ammen received the commendation his officer-like action entitled him to."

"Equally should Lieutenant Colonel Streator of the Pennsylvania National Guard receive commendation, at least from every man whose exercise of authority has made him familiar with the necessities of discipline."

"The act of Iams was distinctly in its nature and purpose an act of mutiny. It was mutiny in a time of emergency when the troops were under arms, if not in time of actual war, and mutiny is justly punishable with death. Possibly some other method for disciplining and disgracing him might have been found, but that the occasion called for punishment prompt and decisive there can be no question. Why, then, should so much sympathy be bestowed upon this worthless guardsman and so little consideration shown an officer who displayed so just a conception of the responsibilities of command? He was on the ground and best understood the nature of the emergency. It is easy to criticize the precise method adopted by him to enforce discipline, and each man of experience will have his own opinion as to whether better might not have been found. But, however the civil courts may deal with him for this, let every soldier send him his commendation and greeting for his prompt recognition of the broad principle of responsibility in command. We fear that we shall have full need of it ere long, for the signs of the times are ominous."

"What would you do, gentlemen of the army, if you found your authority openly defied, and felt compelled to promptly assert it in an organization held together by a loose thread of discipline? We do not by any means ask this question in a captious spirit. It will do great service to the militia to answer it by authority, and it is time that we listen to the opinion of some one besides Nihilists, newspaper humanitarians and the class of loose reasoners who insist that in military matters you should make omelettes without breaking eggs."

"We recall the case of an army officer who learned of an incipient mutiny in his company when he was alone with it at a distant post. He summoned the ring-leader to his tent, and when he entered with his hat on, and refused to remove it when ordered to do so, the Captain shot him down in his tracks. Should a poor soldier be thus summarily executed, the cavaliers might ask, because his manners were not of the best? In military as in civil law it is the intent that constitutes the gravamen of an offense, and it is right that the nature of the intent should be judged, not alone from the act, but from the circumstances attending the act."

"What we mean to say, in one word, is that the time has come when soldiers should keep the touch of the elbow, even though it be not strictly according to the new drill regulations. Let there be no compromising with a public opinion which is directed, not against a particular offense, but against the whole theory of military subordination and duty."

THEY CAME TOGETHER.

A Small Collision on the Chesapeake and Ohio.—No One Injured.

There was another demonstration in the Fifth Ward about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon that two engines cannot, with safety, pass each other on the same track.

The yard engine was backing down toward the city pushing one freight car and met an Eastbound freight train, drawn by engine No. 86, at the intersection of Lexington street. The car attached to the yard engine was completely demolished and the boiler head of the freight engine was stove in. The first car of the freight train also made an ineffectual attempt to climb over the top of the engine and was considerably damaged.

The crews of both engines jumped before the crash and so escaped injury. Frank Smith, engineer on the yard engine had reversed his engine before jumping, and she remaining on the track, started in the opposite direction but was caught and stopped.

The freight train had orders to pass No. 3, Westbound passenger at Springdale, six miles up. She was ten minutes late and consequently running at quite a high rate of speed. There is a curve in the road just at the point of collision and the trainmen could not see each other until but a short distance intervened.

There is a double track running through the Fifth Ward and there was no interruption to traffic.

Everything was cleared away by 7:30.

Bad Whiskey in Bad Negroes.

In an altercation at Washington Sunday evening between William Thomas and Robert Jackson, both of color, the former was guilty of the horrible crime of mayhem. Jackson claims he was assaulted without cause, he simply asking for change after paying Thomas for a drink of whisky. Thomas slashed Jackson with a knife in a dozen places, and, not satisfied, leaned over and bit the end of Jackson's nose off. Jackson was placed in jail, but at the intersection of Dr. Owens he was turned loose to receive surgical attention. The parties will be tried before Judge Plister as soon as Jackson is able to appear. George R. Gill will defend Jackson.

JAMES CLARK has been appointed and sworn in by Mayor Pearce as a special officer, whose duty will be to guard city prisoners while working out fines on the streets. The city officials have had a good deal of trouble of late with the prisoners, owing to the fact that the guards have not in reality been officers of the law and unruly prisoners would not submit to be governed by those they did not deem in authority.

NELLIE ROBERTSON, colored, of Washington was before Squire Grant yesterday afternoon on a charge of keeping a disorderly house. The Squire did not think the evidence sufficiently strong to convict and the prisoner was accordingly dismissed. The arrest was made at the instance of one George Johnson, colored, whom the Robertson woman had a warrant issued for about a week ago, for using abusive language. He was fined by Squire Grant, and this last arrest seems to have been the result of revenge combined with jealousy.

At Ruggles Campground on Sunday there was the largest gathering that has been at these grounds for years, there was about 5,000 present. The meeting was a success financially and spiritually. There was about twenty conversions and additions to the various churches. The improvements that were made this year cost about $630. Everyone seemed pleased with the services rendered by the various preachers. Dr. Aultman and Curtis gave entire satisfaction. The choir under the leadership of Professor Bloom and J. Harry Richardson, cornetist, were highly complimented.

HOT POLITICS.

The Crowning Act of a Sensational Campaign.

Maj. E. B. Murray, a Prominent Man Assaulted by Tillmanites.

Hasty Flight Alone Saves His Own and His Companion's Lives—The Two Men Followed and Pelted With Stones—Politics in South Carolina.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—A special dispatch to the Enquirer from Greenville, S. C., says: Excitement is running high in South Carolina politics. The crowning act of the sensational campaign now in progress was committed Monday when Maj. E. B. Murray, one of the most prominent men in the state, was violently assaulted by the Tillmanites in his own county and made to leave to save his life.

A county meeting was in progress at Sugar Grove, and Maj. Murray, who is a nominee of the conservative faction for delegate to the state nominating convention, was attending with a companion named Gossett. When they arrived a crowd of Tillmanites seized Murray and began the most violent demonstrations. He attempted to go on the stand, but was hurled down and dragged back to his buggy, the crowd beating him with their fists and umbrellas. Being unarmed he and Gossett jumped in the buggy started off, and it was all they could do to run the horse through the crowd. The Tillmanites followed and pelted the two men with stones, denting the buggy and striking Murray. On arriving at Williamstown, where a conservative meeting was in progress, great indignation was expressed and Maj. Murray was called upon to speak. "I simply state facts," said he, "when I say that had Gossett and myself remained there, neither one of us would have been alive at this time."

He said the incident showed the people what confronted them in the campaign. His assailants could not be blamed when the Chief Magistrate (Gov. Tillman), who is bound by the sanction of an oath to enforce the law, announces that he would under certain circumstances lead a lynch party and the attorney-general attends a public meeting armed with a weapon whose only object is the infliction of personal violence. These people could not be blamed when Gov. Tillman walked arm in arm with an avowed lyncher and goes home with him, as he had done with Cal Caughman at Lexington. Maj. Murray said that this stifling of free speech was the result of education—the education of violence, of mob law.

The Knights at Denver.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 9.—The population of this city was increased nearly 30,000 Monday and still the rush continues. Probably one quarter of this number were Knights Templars. The scenes about the Union depot, where eastern and local trains arrived about every fifteen minutes, were lively beyond description. In many of the trains numbers of passengers had stood for hundreds of miles. They were packed to the doors, but the knights and their ladies were comfortable, for they occupied special coaches, and in many cases special trains.

The Weather.

Absent Senators.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Aug. 9.—The revocation of leaves of absence had no effect on the absent senators, only two senators, Stewart and Anderson, showing up Monday morning in response to the telegrams sent out Saturday by the door-keeper. These did not suffice to make a quorum, as only nineteen noses could be counted. As a result no business could be transacted.

Over a Precipice to Death.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Aug. 9.—A horrible accident happened in County H, west of here. A man, his wife and four children were en route in a wagon, when their team ran away, and, dashing over a precipice, killed every one of the six.

Prisoners Escaped.

CEDARTOWN, Ga., Aug. 9.—Seven prisoners escaped from jail here by sawing the grating of the windows and knocking the sheriff down with one of the bars when he came to feed them. Two of the fugitives have been captured, but the rest are still at large.
